The application is designed using the Key Length 256, because is the minimum key that allow encryption and decryption in a half second. The ciphertext is encrypted using a S56 bits key. This key is used during decryption and for generating a key. This key is generated by a random function and is compatible with the symmetric algorithm keylength 256 bits. Files are encrypted directly with their original name. Also the file extension is encrypted and replaced by a random number. The decoy file is named with a random string. The encryption key is stored in memory, and this is regenerated each time it is needed. The decoy is always called the original file. When the program starts the original file is renamed to the decoy file and the decoy file will be processed as the original. The program will hide the decoy file to prevent any access to the original file. If the user stops the program, the encrypted data will be removed from memory, and the original file will be renamed to the decoy again. If the user stops the program, and then open the decoy file, the original file will be decrypted. The program is not dependent on Windows operating systems. Description of the main icons: Concealer is a program based on easy to use functionality and ease of use. It is an efficient way to protect your files using encryption and access to your files. The data is stored encrypted and then can be decrypted at any time. Concealer has no external dependency. Concealer is based on encryption technology using symmetric encryption algorithms and uses a random key generated by the application. When you open the file with Concealer, it will be renamed to a random name, so that others can not open the original file. The program does not have any dependency on Windows. When the application starts the original file is renamed to the decoy file and the decoy file will be processed as the original. If the user stops the application, the encrypted data will be removed from memory, and the original file will be renamed to the decoy file again. If the user stops the application, and then open the decoy file, the original file will be decrypted. The program is not dependent on Windows operating systems. The program was written for users in businesses who want to protect their files from unauthorized access. The following main features help to protect your files using Concealer. -
