One type utilizes a friction brake against which a member, often called a drag bar, is pushed to rotate a wheel. Such brakes may be useful to provide a sense of resistance, but have the disadvantage that they can be overcome by a strong, well-trained person. This may lead to injury of the person using the exercise device. Another type of device utilizes a force resisting mechanism which, unlike the friction brake, requires a person to work to overcome the force and cause the device to rotate. It is important that a person, e.g., a body builder, utilize a force resisting mechanism rather than the friction brake whenever possible. The latter may overheat and cause injury to a person. Also, it is advantageous that a force resisting mechanism be usable by anyone at anytime, such as in a high school gym or the like. It is an object of the invention to provide a force resisting mechanism which may be used by a person not having the strength to operate a friction brake. It is an object of the invention to provide a force resisting mechanism which may be used by a person at any time. A further object of the invention is to provide a force resisting mechanism which is safe to use. A further object of the invention is to provide a force resisting mechanism which may be used by a person with a disability or handicap. Following the movie release of Real Steel, actor and MMA fighter Tony Jaa's second movie, Ong Bak: The True Martial Arts Movie, is in theaters now. To celebrate this, Saban Brands have released the Ong Bak Martial Arts Collection of character icons and wallpapers for your enjoyment. Ong Bak: The True Martial Arts Movie is a remake of Ong Bak (1985) which was directed by Tony Jaa in 2002. The storyline follows a young street fighter who thinks of entering the world of martial arts, and adopts a Japanese wrestler as a mentor. The film gained considerable popularity due to the acting skills of Tony Jaa and stars Eric Ng as the protagonist. It received a sequel in 2008 entitled Ong Bak II. A third film was released in 2010 entitled Ong Bak III: Quest for Fire. Films and television shows with music in various styles, such as movie musicals, dance-oriented films and songs from various songs from TV shows, TV soaps, and songs from motion pictures, and the like, are increasing, and there are often cases where a song that is more popular in a certain region is used as an opening or ending theme in a program for the region. In such a case, there is a possibility that some users that are not aware of the region where the program for a given radio station is broadcast, may listen to the program and enjoy the listening experience with the popular song, which they are not familiar with. For this reason, it is necessary to allow more listeners to become aware of the region in which a program for a given radio station is broadcast. (I deleted the project and made it with a fresh workspace, and it's still broken.) I then installed Android SDK Manager and changed the target and min SDK versions. There is a valid target and min SDK version now, and the problem goes
