John Owens (Australian politician) John Owens (1786 – 3 May 1845) was an Australian politician. He was born at Roseville in the Colony of New South Wales to surgeon William Owens and his wife Anne. He married Elizabeth Smith in 1823, with whom he had a son William. He was a stockbroker at Sydney, and was elected to the New South Wales Legislative Assembly for Camden from 1824 to 1825, serving in the inner ministry under Walter Liberty Putland and William Charles Wentworth. He was defeated in 1825. In 1829 he was elected for the same electorate, and in 1831 he became secretary for agriculture, retiring in 1835. In 1838 he contested Braidwood, but was defeated. He was appointed to the Legislative Council for South Sydney in 1842. He died at Roseville in 1845.
