Brickell City Centre Brickell is a neighborhood within the City of Miami, Florida. The term is sometimes used to refer to the buildings, offices, and residents of the area, and the streets, roads, and public transportation interchange that it includes. Brickell is named for its location on a strip of land bordered by Biscayne Bay to the east and Biscayne Boulevard to the west, northwest of Downtown Miami and South of the Miami River. The land was originally occupied by swampland by Native Americans. Richard Merritt Platt claimed the land in 1845 after Seminole and Miccosukee Indians moved onto it after their expulsion from Florida. History Although Brickell was inhabited by indigenous indigenous people, the area's early European settlers arrived in the middle of the 19th century. On April 26, 1842, Henry S. Merritt established a ferry on the Miami River to serve the new town of Miami. Merritt Ferry soon became the town's commercial hub, with a sawmill, gristmill, a trading post and a mission. The area's early residents began calling the ferry the Brickell Ferry, named after the Brickell building nearby. Soon the area became an English settlement. In 1867, William Aspinwall, an American diplomat and president of the Florida Line Railroad, purchased the barge "Mondego" to use as a floating hotel. The "Mondego" soon became the first hotel of Miami, attracting many wealthy businessmen to the area. The second and third hotels of Miami were the "Crescent" and the "Brickell," which became the most popular places for the wealthy to reside. In 1872, land was purchased from the federal government for the construction of the Brickell Bridge, which was used as a commercial and residential bridge spanning the

The 46th iteration of the event, in Denver, will be televised live by the Republican candidate for the first time this election year. NBC News announced Sunday that Trump will share the stage with Democratic nominee Hillary Clinton on Sept. 26 in a debate that is expected to last 90 minutes. Like the 1998 debate between then-Vice President Al Gore and then-President Bill Clinton, the one in Denver will be the most important face-to-face showdown between Trump and Clinton in what could be a nail-biter, complete with unpredictable audience questions and tense back-and-forth exchanges. "It's a great honor and I am thrilled. It will be a tremendous event," Trump told The Associated Press during an interview on "Fox News Sunday." "I believe that the media will also be fair, and I think it will be a very big night for the future of our country. And I hope to get there if the numbers are there and if I do well." Plot Due to an "inside job", Detective Kimberly Miller is now blacklisted by all agencies in the city. To prove herself, she is asked to work with her ex-partner, Detective Gino Colapessa, who has just been placed on a temp suspension. They are given a lead about a missing girl in connection with an old case in which she was assigned. Apparently, she went missing, and her parents are in town, looking for her. Reception Critical response Ian Jane of DVD Talk gave the film a positive review and wrote "There's nothing new or different here, but it is entertaining, and that's not bad." Rob Salem of DVD Verdict gave the film two stars out of five and wrote that the film's premise is "far too well-worn", and that the main characters are flat and often forget to use their common sense.
