Rather than waiting until the end of the semester to share the conversation, we can engage students in the process of interviewing. For example, students can observe interview practices first hand with other groups. They can critique others' interviews at the end of the semester. In the meantime, we can share photos of the process along the way. 3. Transform more content and assessment into learning. Many of the slide decks shown above are completed in a two hour conversation that links a deep question with student learning. Where else can we embed that kind of thinking and practice in our classroom? Andrea Zens Photo by Andrea Zens; New Zealand. 3.1. Question-based questions. Question-based questions are questions which prompt students to think about themselves, their learning, and their individual and collective work. A question such as: "What makes a good peer review team?" can promote student thinking, but also allows them to dive more deeply into peer review. By asking students to RadioNet is the perfect application to stream audio over the Internet. It's not any competitor of XM/Sirius, but it's much better and free. The application supports XM and Sirius streams, as well as other audio streams. You can enter a virtual channel to hear only the broadcast that matches this channel, and you can also use a MusicGrid to sort the list of available stations by your favourite artist. And the best of all: you don't need a cable anymore! There are currently many streamed radio stations.

RadioNet Installation: 1- Run the.exe file. 2- Click on the 'Open radio list' button. 3- Click on the 'Add your radio station to the list' button. 4- Select a radio stream from the list, and put its URL in the 'Radio Stream URL' box. 5- Click on the 'Add radio stream' button. 6- Click on the 'Save preferences' button. 7- Click on the 'Apply' button. 8- Click on the 'OK' button. 9- Close the application and return to the main window. 10- Go to the bottom-right corner of the window and click on the 'Radio Stream' button. 11- Click on the radio station that you like.
