structure on a portable Flash drive. It is intended for use with the Open Source software Cenote (To use the application with other software, it should be installed on a Windows-based computer and then copied to the portable drive. The pROBs program is released under the GNU General Public License Version 2. Features:
Create directories on a portable USB drive based on the following criteria: *

- * Size, i.e., size of data on the USB drive (in bytes);
- * Last modification date, i.e., the date the directory was last written to the USB drive;
- * Last access time, i.e., the date the directory was last opened;
- * Path name, i.e., the directory path name on the drive.

The program searches in the current directory on the USB drive, and the pROBs interface shows you the search results in a tree structure. The user can create, edit and delete the directories. Before deleting, the data in a directory is inspected to see whether or not it is too old. If the data is not too old, it is automatically deleted; if the data is too old, the directory is moved to a different directory and the data is deleted. pROBs can also copy the data from one directory to another. This can be useful when you move your USB drive from one computer to another. In addition, it is possible to set the "last access time" of a directory. This can prevent losing data when you move the drive from one computer to another, because the older data will be deleted automatically.
