Kirby Super Star NTSC-U.wad ((LINK))

metroid and metroid prime are both side-scrolling platform/roguelike action games. in brawl and ultimate , samus represents the former and link represents the latter. the ending of brawl also ended with samus removing her helmet in true metroid fashion if kirby had defeated all of the metroids. samus appears during the credits of ultimate as well, but this time giving kirby a heart star, instead of removing her helmet. the "alarm ring" in this stage's name is a reference to the "alarm clock" in "a" “red alarm” without “yellow alarm” from “green alarm” (two of the original nes-era kirby titles). the alarm cue would be a frequent pop-in in those games. although this alarm ring is different from all previous alarm rings in the same game. taking place on the milky way, both players start near the bottom-left corner of the screen, and the starting positions are not fixed; kirby can be anywhere on the scene, as usual. both players start with one copy of kirby super star ultra, which is the only way to play this stage. once the match starts, both players start shooting each other with their fire balloons. after every two rounds of shots, a sort of trash can drop below the level, leaving a lot of garbage for the taking. every round of balloon shooting during the match includes fireballs of various colors, and at the end of the match, the color of the most recently taken balloon will turn black, so that it can easily be confused for a balloon. at the end of the match, if either player has 2 or 3 hearts, they will get a "final smash", which follows the rules of the name of the character (except for the flaming star in kirby super star), and is also decided at the end of each round of balloon shots. a stage is named at the end of the match: super smash bros.. while the numbers of hearts given to players for the final smash is fixed, the number of fire balloons shot per round is variable.

Kirby Super Star NTSC-U.wad

as a tie-in to the release of mario golf, the stage is a name change for the classic super mario bros. level "skips." for this stage, mario is using his golf clubs instead of his super mario bros. power ups. a set of four blue mushrooms (the one with the green banana on it) is hidden in this stage, which can be used to block the other player's projectiles with no effect. in similar fashion to how gunstar, wario, and waddle dee are featured in the warioware series, this stage features six troopas from kirby's dream land 2. it also goes past the four-stage cap for warioware games. the stage is a new multi-space version of the chaos palace in kirby super star. a gigantic rainbow-colored block will appear on top of the screen if the player loses a life, while kirby is gone. players can remain in the final space for as long as they want, unless an enemy touches them, at which point they will be erased from the board. if the opponent strikes the block while it is in the final space, it will fall into the sea below, thereby ending the match. kirby falls onto the courtyard of the castle in kirby's dream land 2 as a tribute to the castle in the original game. while this stage is in the omega version, it is the only one that is part of the three-space limit; thus, it is accessible to both 8- and 16-bit players, as opposed to other omega stages, which are not playable for any players but those with a 16-bit game boy player adapter. the main story mode is the same story mode that would be carried over into the later game, kirby: double trouble! it is up to the player to defeat various bosses in order to save the mushroom world. this game takes place on the same world as the first four kirby games. there are also a few secret bosses and optional missions to go on.
